Couple charged with growing marijuana plants

By BRENT MACEY

A Waveland couple gave themselves up to the Hancock County Sheriff's Department Sunday after a search Friday by the department lead to reported confiscation of 18 marijuana plants, a sawed off shotgun and an additional ounce of marijuana at the couple's home.

Sheriff Ronald Peterson said, Ronald Taylor Dawson, 43, and his wife Ann, 32, of 208 Third Street, were in Florida

Memorial Day weekend when law enforcement officials searched their home.

Peterson said a confidential informant lead department officials to Waveland residence.

The couple is charged with growing and cultivating marijuana, possession of marijuana and possession of a sawed-off shotgun.

After obtaining a search warrant, Peterson said the back yard was searched and the plants confiscated. "Subsequent search of the house later revealed the 4-10 sawed-off shotgun and additional marijuana," he stated.

Peterson said articles of drug paraphernalia were also discovered and confiscated.

The couple was released on $1,500 bond.

A pre-trial hearing is scheduled May 27 before Justice Court Judge Lee Klien.

He said the chief, now deceased, and an officer whom he would not name, had no authority to determine a boundary line different from the one which has been established by law.

Hanley said the same official who made the agreement patrolled the area for ten years and no one from the commission knew the "true boundaries" were not being enforced.

Hanley said two enforcement officials from the bureau visited the area last Thursday and discovered the "arbitrary boundary" was being enforced.

Hanley said the fishermen were warned they were fishing inside Mississippi waters and were "advised" to move into Louisiana waters.

"We did everything we could and a handful of fishermen refused to abide by what is the boundary of the state and forced officers to arrest them in order to stop them."

Hanley said the fishermen arrested were north of the Intracoastal Canal. Strong stated he was south of the deepwater channel and on the edge of what Mississippi officials say is the state line when he was arrested.

A trial was scheduled Wednesday night for three shrimpers arrested Friday and Saturday.

The shrimpers were represented by J.P. Compretta and John Gent represented the state.

Hancock stores to sell state shrimping permits

By WAYNE DUCOMB JR.
Mississippi shrimping licenses will be sold at two Hancock County locations the end of this week or early next week.

Previously, the closest location offering the licenses to local residents has been the Mississippi Bureau of Marine Resources' Pass Christian office on South Market Street. Licenses will still be available there.

Louisiana's shrimping season opened May 15 and Mississippi's is scheduled to begin June 1.

J. P. Compretta of Bay St. Louis, Hancock County's state representative, Tuesday reported that Al Kingston's Barber Shop on Railroad Avenue in Bay St. Louis and Kent and Sue's Quick Stop on Lower Bay Road in Lakeshore will both be selling the licenses.

"The merchants will be offering the licenses as soon as paperwork is processed authorizing performance bonds and approval is received from BMR," Compretta said.

"We expect the two locations will be selling the licenses either by the end of this week or early next week," he stated.

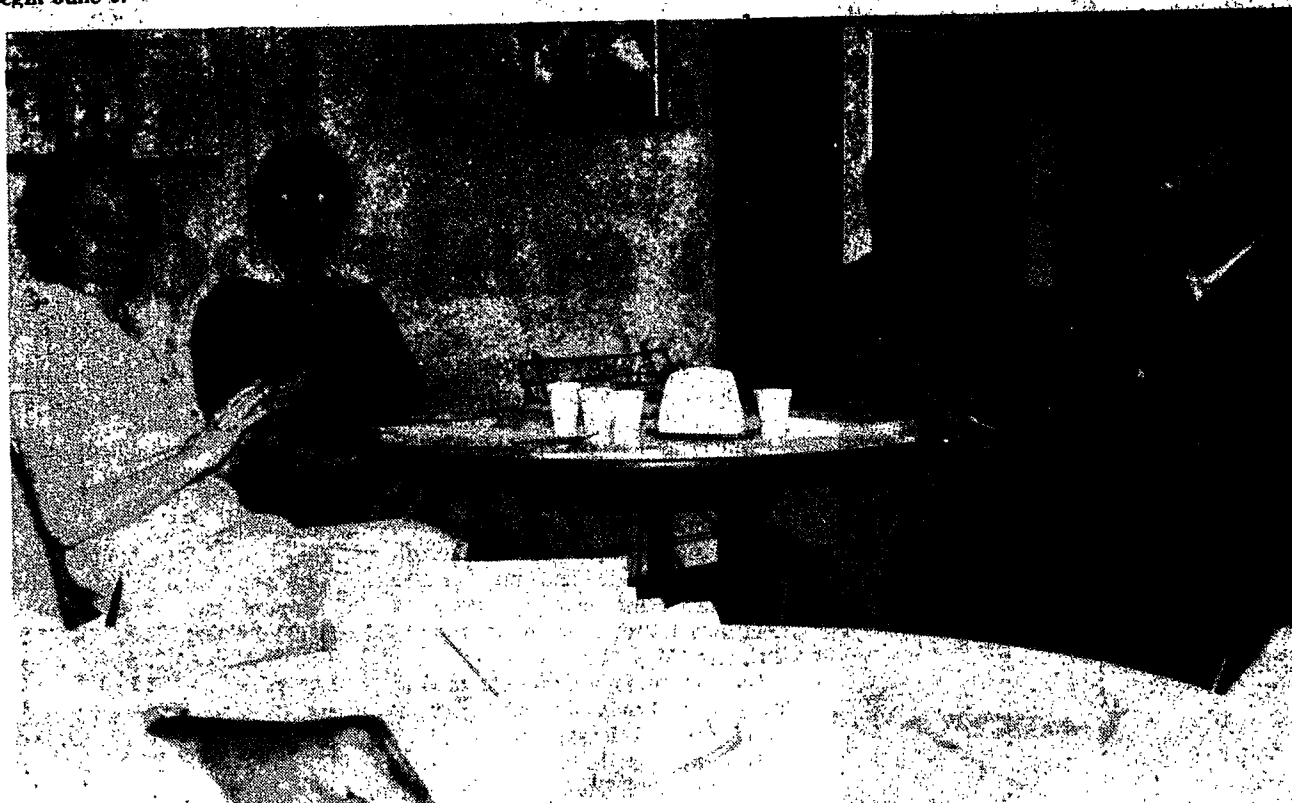

"I helped establish these licensing locations for the convenience of the county's residents and the two stores will be issuing the licenses from now on," Compretta explained.

"A local store was selling the licenses before, but the owner decided not to sell them anymore," he stated.

"I would like to complement Kent Seller and Al Kingston for providing this service for our fishermen because the merchants will only receive a minimal fee in return," the representative noted.

The two locations also sell hunting and fishing licenses.

Compretta advised that state law requires fishermen unloading Louisiana shrimp at Mississippi docks to possess licenses from both states.

Consumer specialist suggests vacation, recreation budgets

MONEY TALK

By NORINE BARNES

How much should a family spend for recreation? There is no pattern because each family has a different set of needs.

In 1979, the average American family spent about 3.7 percent of income on entertainment.

This included books, magazines, cable, and HBO, hobbies, pets, and movies.

The amount of money to be spent on recreation is often determined by the amount of money left after paying debts, housing, food, transportation, and clothing.

Determine how much you spent on recreation, entertainment, and vacation in 1980. You might want to separate the cost into two categories.

"Be sure to include any item you associate with recreation. Don't overlook club dues, concerts, and HBO. Include total expenditures of such recreational activities as walking."

"I walk for recreation" is a popular comment, but the walker sometimes forgets the $40 investment in good walking shoes.

Evaluate the use of your recreational dollars. Are you satisfied with the fun and recreation received from your dollars? Do you want to make any changes?

What recreational activities will be most beneficial to your family? How much money will be necessary for the vacation planned for June or July? Divide the amount of money needed by the number of months until the vacation and save that amount of vacation money monthly. A family goal might be to enjoy a vacation every three years; thus, allowing more time to accumulate sufficient savings.

More fun may be bought by careful planning. Timing is important. Special holidays usually mean higher prices.

Take a vacation close to home. Let your home be your motel and visit in a 50-75 mile radius.

Stay overnight in budget hotels. Check in before inexpensive rooms are taken. If flying is in your plans, ask about savers' plans and night rates.

Select a hobby that is almost costless if money is not available for recreation. Some ideas are bird watching, reading, and window shopping.

A word of caution — be skeptical about unbelievable offers via mail. Check with the Better Business Bureau or Consumer Protection Office before leaving home to enjoy a "free" vacation. On one occasion, free meals were limited to 2 a.m. to 5 a.m. in order to discourage consumers from taking advantage of free meal offers.

Recreational activities for a family should be planned to provide refreshing experiences for all members of the family. It is important that the cost of recreation, entertainment, and vacations be included in the total budget.

The choice and cost of recreation is the responsibility of each family. Sometimes a "trade-off" is helpful. Example: "I'll give up eating lunch out so the family can have a swim club membership."

TO THE VOTERS OF WARD THREE

Back in 1977 our city adopted a new form of government which was meant to be more representative of the people. Each of the four city districts or wards was to have a resident elected who would be accountable to his constituents.

Our city's third ward was so designed as to give the minority segment of the population a fair share in the operation of our city government.

We, the undersigned, being Black, felt then as now that we were given a chance to have one of our own in properly represent us.

We were very satisfied with the results of that first such election which placed a Black on the city council.

We feel that the public should now be questioning itself as to whether a non-Black should really represent this district.

Our question can be resolved by electing to office a person who can fully understand and represent on personal capability and qualifications, the true feelings of the Black community.

Do we possibly now have an indirect candidate operating behind the scene to win the support of the Third Ward? If so, would this be the representation we should be expecting on our next city council?

With a qualified Black person elected to office we feel that the Black community outside the third ward would have true representation even though it would not be constituent to that elected official.

For these reasons we urge all voters of the third ward to cast their ballot in favor of the candidate who will favorably represent us.

Sincerely,
Ethel Weaver

Enjoy fresh fruits now, food specialist urges

Many fresh fruits are available now to delight your family at mealtime. They are bright in color and provide a host of vitamins and minerals.

"Most fresh fruits contain large amounts of vitamin C," says Eleanor Coats, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service food and nutrition specialist.

"The deep yellow fruits (peaches, cantaloupe, and apricots) contain vitamin A. Good sources of iron include dried fruits such as raisins, dates, prunes, dried apricots and peaches.

In addition, fresh fruits add needed fiber to the diet. With the exception of avocados and ripe olives, fruits do not contain any appreciable amount of fat."

Purchase fresh fruits in amounts that can be used in a few days. Handle them carefully and store them properly to conserve quality.

When fruits are at the peak of perfection, their starch content will have changed to sugar, resulting in full sweet flavor and characteristic aroma and color.

The liquid content of some fruits increases as they ripen. When selecting citrus fruits, peaches, pineapple and melons, look for those that are heavy in relation to their size.

Leave under-ripe fruits at room temperature and out of direct sunlight.

Some fruits will not ripen further after picking: grapes, pineapple and watermelon.

Before storing fruits, sort them and use or discard damage fruits immediately. Most fruits, except berries and cherries, should be washed and dried before storing.

Mrs. Coats lists whole fresh fruits that may be stored in the refrigerator, and the time they can be held for high quality:

—Apples, eating ripe - one week

—Apricots - three to five days

—Blackberries - one or two days

—Blueberries - three to five days

—Figs - one or two days

—Grapes - three to five days

—Peaches - three to five days

—Plums - three to five days

—Strawberries - one or two days

—Watermelon - three to five days

Bananas should be held at room temperature to ripen. Ripe bananas may be stored in the refrigerator. The skin will darken but the flesh of the banana remains flavorful. Use within three to five days.

Berries are especially perishable. Do not wash before refrigerating, and do not remove the caps. Sort carefully and place in shallow containers so air can circulate.

Citrus fruits are stored best at cool room temperature, 60 to 70 degrees F. Use within two weeks. They may be stored in the refrigerator uncovered, but the skin may become pitted and the flesh may discolor.

Store melons (except watermelons) uncovered at room temperature if they are under-ripe. Ripe melons should be refrigerated and used within two days.

Use pineapples promptly after purchase. If necessary to hold them for a day or two, refrigerate. Once cut, pineapple should be used in two to three days.

"When preparing fully ripe fresh fruit, do not add sugar, enjoy the fruit's own flavor and sweetness," Coats adds.

Federal government blasted for turning back on infants, elderly

May 22, 1981
To the Editor
The Sea Coast Echo
Bay St. Louis

Dear Sir:

In the course of one week, the Executive Branch of the federal government, alienated the elderly and the babies with Social Security changes, and voting in the United Nations for selling a lethal baby formula milk to third world countries.

The President, in my opinion, will lose on the first, i.e. Social Security, statesmanship or not, because Congress will not tamper with this program—if, of course, congressmen want to be re-elected.

As for bankruptcy, just score tactics, "crying wolf" and using the old can game of numerical, mystical mongering.

Just mention New York City, Chrysler, and Lockheed, and many more to come. The pros will find a way; they got us into it, and now they will get us out of it.

Festival promoters blame Fairgrounds Commission for restroom problems

May 26, 1981
Editor
Sea Coast Echo

Dear Sir:

We want to say thanks to the thousand or so people who came out to our first Hancock Music Festival at the Hancock Fairground, especially to those who stayed and fought the mess in the restrooms.

For the hundred or so who could not take it and left we would like to apologize.

As most of you know, it was not our fault. When we rented the building we were not told of the previous trouble with the restrooms.

We called in a plumber, (who was very nice to come out on a Sunday) but he could not help us.

We were informed the septic tank was overflowing, that it was too small to take care of a large crowd.

The people from other states who had to leave left with very bad thoughts about our county fairgrounds.

Quite a few voiced their feelings to me. I do not blame them for leaving. I would have left myself.

No one wants to walk in four inches of water to get to a restroom.

Again, thanks to those who stayed. The sad thing is the money we lost for our fund for disabled children and adults in Hancock County.

The Hancock County Fairgrounds could be a big asset to the county if it was properly maintained.

I urge the fairgrounds commission to have the problem corrected before renting the building again.

No one wants to pay $300 a day with no restrooms.

Those who came will agree everything else was perfect.

Thanks to Grand Ole Opry star Bill Phillips for coming by.

Thank you!

Conviction to be easier, penalties stiffer for DUI

An amended Mississippi law on driving while drinking has been amended to make it easier for law enforcement officers to clear the highways and streets of dangerous drivers.

Under the new law which takes effect July 1, the charge of driving while intoxicated (DWI) has been deleted.

The new charge, driving under the influence (DUI), also carries new penalties for those convicted.

Most important to the law enforcement officer is the change in the law which lowers the blood alcohol level to .10 from .15 to sustain a charge of driving under the influence of intoxicants.

Under the amendments, a highway patrol officer, sheriff, deputy or police officer of an incorporated municipality may administer or direct that a breath test be given to a motorist suspected of driving under the influence.

The Mississippi Crime Lab will issue permits to certified intoximeter and intoxilyzer operators and inspect testing equipment.

Should a motorist refuse to take a breath test under the new law, the officer will take his driver license, the Commissioner of Public Safety will notify the violator by registered or certified mail of notice to suspend the license in 30 days, and after the 30 day notice, will revoke the license for 90 days.

Under the penalty provisions, after first offense conviction of driving under the influence, a driver will face a $200 fine and attendance in a four-week alcohol safety education program. Should the driver not attend the alcohol education program, the court shall suspend the driver license for one year.

However, the court can reduce the period of suspension or impose limitations in a first offender hardship case.

For a second DUI offense within two years, the fine could be from $250 to $1,000 and a license suspended for six months.

For a third or subsequent offense within four years, the fine could be from $500 to $1,000 and a two year loss of the driver license.

Under provisions of the law after July 1, the justice courts are prohibited from suspending any portion of the fine.

The county and district attorneys are directed to represent the State in all appeals from justice or county court under the new law.

An important feature of the new law will be made available to law enforcement officers and justice court judges for proper administration of the act.

Government protecting industry could have devastating effects

Government intervention to aid troubled industries—including American automakers—could have a devastating long range effect, says a University of Mississippi economist.

"Those in favor of protection for companies would argue that in the short run it will help fight unemployment," says Dr. S. Cabell Shull.

"But in the long run, if you legislate action to bail out companies, there will be long-lasting damage to our economic efficiency and productivity."

Dr. Shull advocates unrestricted international trade and believes that such protectionist measures as quotas on foreign car imports could hurt the U.S. economy by leading other nations to limit American imports.

"There's a great deal of pressure on governments in the world now to protect industries, but there is a real danger of that protection snowballing," Dr. Shull said.

"If the United States establishes import quotas to protect certain industries, then other countries could do the same, thereby hurting segments of the American economy that are dependent on total free access to world trade markets."

"American agriculture depends on this free trade," he said.

"We move more than $30 billion worth of agricultural exports from this country each year. We're massive exporters in this area. And, the agricultural community is in favor of complete free trade because a protectionist stance makes it very hard for them to penetrate foreign markets," said Dr. Shull.

"If we adopt protectionism in one area such as with automobiles, then foreign governments could do the same with our agricultural goods, and we would be forced to sell to underdeveloped countries rather than cash markets such as Western Europe.

"If you throw out our old trade, we still have a positive balance of trade overall, so the U.S. should want free access to trading," he said. "We can't protect certain industries from their own incompetence and possibly damage our overall trade balance."

Dr. Shull believes voluntary trade agreements between countries can solve short-term economic problems. "Legislation that automatically limits imports is extremely difficult to remove while voluntary agreements, which we have used throughout history, eventually fade away once the problems subside."

Portillo expressed an interest in long-term business relations with Mississippi and offered the services of his office to arrange any meetings needed by Mississippi businessmen to establish trade relations.

In a meeting with the Mexican Under-Secretary of Agriculture, Winter discussed Mississippi's vast agricultural resources and expertise. The food products which Mississippi farms are seeking to export to Mexico and its undernourished population include soybeans, rice, livestock feed, and high protein Nutrilake products.

Mississippi can also assist the development of the Mexican economy by selling farm equipment and implements which Mexico desperately needs as it seeks to modernize its system of agriculture.

Winter also promoted Mississippi forest products, supplies and equipment.

NEWS FROM THE GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

Governor William Winter, who returned last week from a two-day trade and economic development mission to Mexico, said he expects "tangible and concrete economic ties and trade relations with Mexico" to result from the trip.

Winter, who was accompanied by 14 Mississippi businessmen, went to Mexico "to insure that Mississippi takes full advantage of the significant market opportunities in that country."

"Much of what Mexico needs is produced in Mississippi," Winter noted. "This includes agricultural products, farm equipment, forest products, and a wide range of industrial equipment. We need to tap this important market to which we have easy transportation access provided by our common lake, the Gulf of Mexico."

"During this trip, Winter met with Mexican President Lopez Portillo who is scheduled to meet with President Reagan in early June. The two leaders discussed a variety of economic development issues, including the need

POSITIVE PROJECTIONS, POSITIVE STEPS

Mississippi's personal income growth is projected to be the ninth highest in the nation over the next 20 years and second highest among the southern states.

The projection, made by the U.S. Commerce Department's Bureau of Economic Analysis, indicates that Mississippi will have an average annual personal income growth rate of 4.1 percent over the 20 years. The national average, for the same period, was projected at 3.3 percent.

The report indicated growth probably will come from continued migration of manufacturing and private-service industries taking advantage of relatively lower wage rates, taxes, energy costs, and costs, and mild climate.

Despite the positive outlook of this projection for Mississippi, the state can ill afford to rest on its laurels. There are reasons why Mississippi can experience this growth rate. The Mississippi Economic Council has recommended six steps which should lead to increased per capita income for Mississippi citizens.

They include organizing an alliance among the southern states to preserve the region's federally based economic incentives; maintaining and protecting the state's favorable business climate; creating a cabinet-level position of senior economic advisor in the Governor's office; improving and protecting the professional stature of the state's economic development program; encouraging the development of small, home-owned businesses; and improving the level of education with an emphasis on the development of basic skills in the elementary grades.

BACK TO BASICS

Results of a recent nationwide poll reveal that a majority of Americans believe that the greatest threat to the nation's well-being is big government.

This charge that the federal government is at the heart of the problems facing the country largely embraces the political philosophy of our third president, Thomas Jefferson, who believed that government should be "rigorously frugal and simple."

In his first inaugural address in 1801, Jefferson said "government shall leave them (the people) otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned. This is the sum of good government."

But government has not left the people alone.

Americans are now faced with excessive government spending, inflation, and inefficient and inappropriate rules and regulations—all of which translate into higher prices and increased inflation.

Americans now have an administration in Washington with an economic package designed to reduce inflation, balance the federal budget, reduce taxation, and increase productivity.

The current economic programs recommended to Congress parallel recommendations the Mississippi Economic Council has long advocated. The Council recommends that the state's business leadership, state and local governments, and all Mississippians join in support of the principles of economic reform presented to the Congress by President Reagan.

FREEDOM OF CHOICE

Americans have long enjoyed and taken for granted freedoms that citizens in other countries can only dream about.

But most Americans do not realize that the basis of our liberty is not political freedom but economic freedom. Political freedom cannot long endure without economic freedom.

Perhaps the most important economic liberty is freedom of choice, which allows Americans the freedom of enterprise, freedom to produce, freedom to save and invest, freedom to profit and compete, and freedom to generate wealth.

The Mississippi Economic Council has long recognized the importance of economic freedom. The Council's educational arm, the American Enterprise Center, is carrying that message to the public and private schools in the state through a continuing series of teacher workshops.

This past school year, the AEC has held economic education workshops in more than 200 schools across the state, both public and private. More than 1,300 classroom teachers have been enrolled in the courses.

Areas covered in the courses include comparisons of the American enterprise system with other economic systems, an explanation of our economic system and how it works, techniques for incorporating economic education into classroom instruction, and a description of the resource materials available from the American Enterprise Center Library in Jackson.

Requests for economic education workshops for the 1981-82 school year should be directed to the American Enterprise Center, P.O. Box 1849, Jackson, Mississippi 39205.

TO BALANCE THE BUDGET

Thirty state legislatures, including Mississippi's, have passed resolutions calling for a constitutional convention to draft an amendment requiring a balanced federal budget.

Under Article V of the Constitution a convention will be called, if three more states act.

The need for such action cannot be overstated. For example, between 1975 and 1979, the federal tax bill increased eight times as much as fuel bills—a fact that cancels out most arguments that inflation can be blamed on rising energy costs.

In fact, the blame for inflation and a whole host of woes now afflicting the economy can be directly traced to government overspending.

The Mississippi Economic Council has long advocated that the president should be required to submit budgets to Congress in which proposed expenditures shall not exceed estimates of revenue.

beach project by the Bureau of Marine Resources approximately one month ago.

That money is federal money however, and federal officials in Washington must also approve those funds for the project if that money is to be granted.

Also involved with that grant is an additional $60,000 in matching funds from the county, Waveland and Bay St. Louis, bringing the total amount of potential money for repair work to $320,000.

Donn Murray, a representative of Broadway and Seal engineering firm in Piquette who was partially responsible for preparing the initial preapplication to the bureau for the funding, had said pumping sand was included in the preapplication to the bureau.

He had stated the bureau would allow money to be spent entirely on the beach road only if sand was not readily available and the pumping cost was found to be too expensive.

Sam Perniclaro, member of the board of supervisors, had objected to even attempting to have the money spent on pumping sand. He said repairs to the road should be given first priority, since not enough money would be available to repair the road after the sand was pumped.

Gordon Larson, a representative from the Bureau of Marine Resources and director of CEIP funds, Tuesday resolved the issue by stating the money will not have to be spent on pumping sand into the beach area.

He said the preapplication submitted by Murray to the bureau would have been "rated" just as highly if restoration of the beach had not been included in the beach road project preapplication.

He said after Tuesday's meeting that preapplications are rated by the bureau and money is awarded upon that rating.

He advised Murray and Larry Seal, partner in Broadway and Seal, not to include the sand beach proposal in the application which will be sent to Washington since road repair work is the number one priority.

The engineering firm must submit an environmental assessment of the project and a plan showing how the money will be spent along with the application to Washington.

Larson, who will send the complete application to Washington, said he would handle the application and urged the engineering firm to submit the other two necessary reports to his office as soon as possible.

Larson said the CEIP funding will be cut from the federal budget September 30, the end of the federal fiscal year.

He said deadline in his office is five days before June 15, so he can check the three parts of the application before mailing.

"The problem is getting the money back from Washington. If the reports are not in within two weeks of today you might as well write the money off," Larson said.

He said any problem in the application reviewing process in Washington could delay the application until after the September deadline and kill any chances of receiving the money.

Murray said the two reports should be completed by the end of this week. After the meeting Murray said not including the sand pumping process will make the environmental assessment report "easier" since a study of oyster beds along the coast will now not have to be included.

He told Larson at the meeting the two reports were each "50 percent complete" as of Tuesday.

Larson said the money, if approved, will be sent from Washington to the bureau who will then administer the funds to the county in segments.

He stated the county will contract a construction firm and will also decide when payments will be made for work accomplished.

He said the county could choose to have payments made at completion of sections of the job or could elect to make payments to companies on a monthly basis.

"All work must be inspected by the Bureau of Marine Resources before any payments are allocated to the county," Larson said.

"The work must be done before the payments are allocated," he said.

Larry Seal, of Broadway and Seal, asked if road construction must conform to federal or state road regulations.

Larson said the money will become state money if Washington approves the grant and therefore road construction work will have to meet state regulations.

After the meeting, Perniclaro said Broadway and Seal Engineers will be supervising construction of the job since Seal is the county engineer.

Seal said the skip curbing will be installed in the worst sections of beach road.

Murray said Seal designed that type of curb and the two agreed that approximately two miles of skip curb already have been installed on sections of the road.

"I would say only about 30 feet of that curb has washed out," Seal said.

Last week Murray stated the worst sections of Beach Road are located in areas where skip curbing has not been installed.

He explained that skip curb does not allow ocean water to seep into cracks between curbing slabs and thus prevents sand under the road from washing out and causing the road to collapse.

Job search necessary for stamps

People receiving food stamps will soon be provided expanded placement services through the offices of the Mississippi State Employment Service along the Coast.

In cooperation with the Welfare Offices, the Employment Service will provide assistance aimed at helping qualified food stamp recipients to become gainfully employed and self-supporting.

This will include intensive job search aid in addition to other service which will prepare them for the labor market.

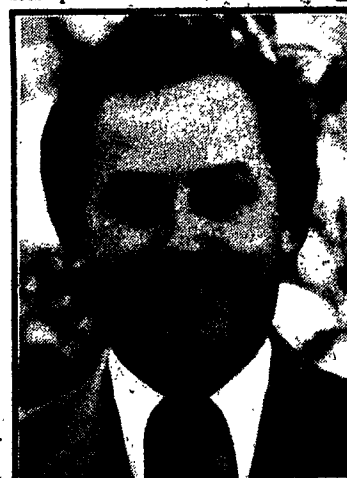

Food stamp recipients who meet the requirement of the "job search" category must actively seek work on their own as well as follow-up on interviews and referrals given by the Employment Service.

Davis said that control enables Markel to achieve optimum plant growth and yield.

Markel said he tests the soil pH factor (amount of hydrogen ions in the soil).

"Some plants do better with a low pH," Markel stated.

Strawberry plants are an example he said. The plants like a more acid soil for best results. For that reason, Markel has altered the growing bed to achieve a low pH reading in order to achieve optimum results for his strawberry plants.

Another benefit of the synthetic soil pertains to weed growth.

Davis explained the soil is sterile when originally mixed. Because it is sterile, very few weed seeds are contained in the mixture.

"If you go out and dig up regular dirt for a potted plant, there most likely will be a number of weed seeds in the soil," he said.

Markel said he has pulled up only six or eight weeds in his entire garden this year.

He stated the rapid growth of his plants also added to reducing the number of weeds since the plants "shaded out" any weeds which might otherwise have had the opportunity to grow.

On a deck located above a room in Markel's house, numerous vegetable plants are also being grown in pots.

Davis said this type of growing is what he thought would be beneficial to gardeners living in apartment houses with small areas in which to plant.

"With the synthetic soil, you can achieve optimum growth with potted plants," he said.

He added the amount of soil needed to grow plants in pots greatly reduces the amount of soil needed and thus eliminates expense in starting a large synthetic soil garden.

Davis said the synthetic soil Markel uses is "very similar" to the type of soil used in nurseries for starting vegetable seedlings.

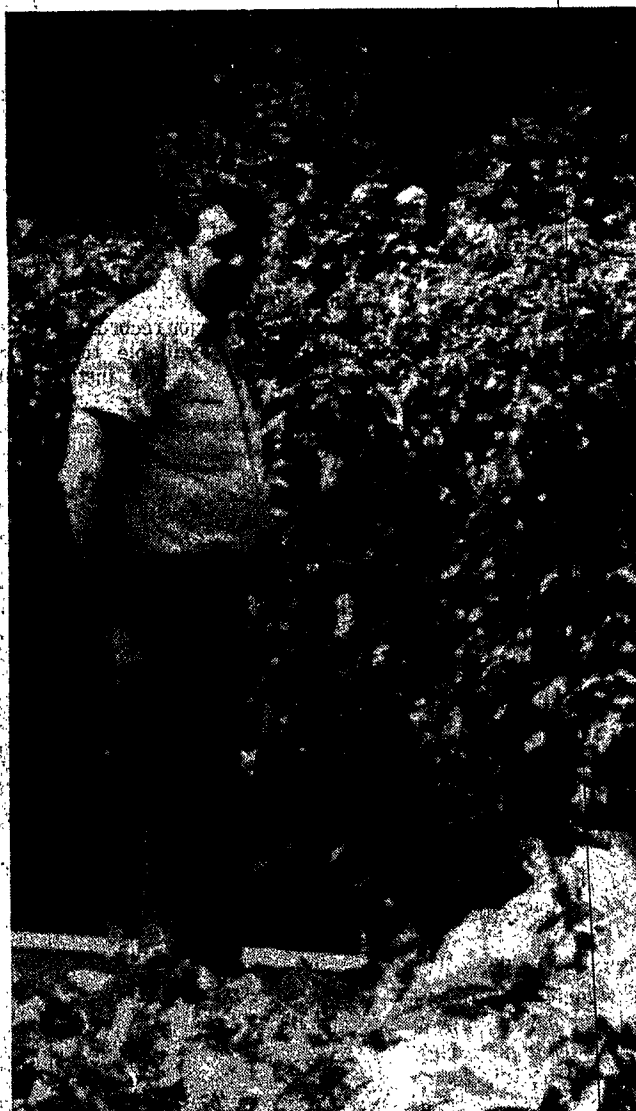

He said flowers have been grown to maturity in synthetic soil for years.

Davis said the synthetic soil has rarely been used to grow vegetable plants to maturity however.

Markel said he believed synthetic gardening will eventually become widely used in commercial growing of vegetables.

The Mississippi Authority for Educational Television has contacted Markel. A televised program is slated for Monday evening, June 1 on the ETV network.

According to "Farmweek" reporter Susie Vann, Markel will discuss his garden with reporter John Winfield and will also share some gardening methods with viewers.

SIX FOOT HIGH TOMATO PLANTS—Merlin Markel stands in front of tomato plants in Diamondhead which are already six feet high and expected to reach eight feet before the tomatoes ripen. A special synthetic soil which Markel mixed himself, is considered responsible for the fast and hardy plant growth. Markel and his garden will be featured on the Educational Network Monday evening June 1. (Staff photo by Brent Macey)

A HEALTHY KOHLRABI—Merlin Markel holds up a healthy kohlrabi just plucked from his synthetic soil garden. The vegetable is similar to a turnip and a member of the cabbage family. Markel grew the plant in soil composed of peat moss, perlite, and sand. Small quantities of nutrients were also added to achieve complete balance and "control" over the soil. Markel said plants grow 20 percent faster in the synthetic soil and because the soil is soft and sterile, weeding and hoeing are almost eliminated. (Staff photo by Brent Macey)

ASCS Report

Increases in loan rates to 14.5 percent for 1981-crop loans and farm storage facility and dryer loans, and other changes in the facility and dryer loans, and other changes in the facility loan program were announced today by the U.S. Department of Agriculture official.

Edward Hews, acting executive vice president of the Commodity Credit Corporation, said the increase affects all facility and dryer loans approved beginning April 1 and 1981-crop commodity loans.

Further, he said, beginning next October, the interest rate on 1981 crop and facility loans made after today will carry a "floating" interest rate, subject to adjustment each Oct. 1 and April 1.

Previously, CCC had charged 11.5 percent on crop loans and 12.5 percent on facility and dryer loans. The new interest rate and the variable adjustment procedure will not apply to 1980 crop loans and facility and dryer loans already in effect, Hews said.

Interest rates announced today are based on the cost of CCC of borrowing money from the U.S. Treasury, Hews said. The change to a variable interest rate on outstanding loans will enable CCC to adjust rates in line with treasury borrowing costs, he said.

Hews also announced the following changes in the farm storage facility and dryer loan program:

—An increase in the loan down payments from 14 percent to 25 percent.

Storage needs will be based on one year's production instead of two years.

—All existing storage space will be considered in determining storage capacity. In the past, space already in use to store grain under the farmer-owned grain reserve was not counted in figuring storage needs.

—The maximum term of new loans will be five years; existing loans are for eight years.

—The maximum amount a farmer may borrow or have outstanding under the program is reduced from $100,000 to $50,000.

Hews said the higher interest rate and the actions for making facility and dryer loans announced today are expected to result in a savings to the U.S. government of about $29 million for the balance of fiscal year 1981 and $145 million for fiscal year 1982.

BATTILING THE BARK

Doubtless you've heard the expression "his bark is worse than his bite." For someone spending a sleepless night listening to his neighbor's dog howling, I'm sure nothing could be truer.

Barking is a dog's normal response to a variety of circumstances. How long or how vigorously a particular dog will bark depends on the situation and the dog's breeding.

Terriers or crossbred terriers, for example, are generally nervous, rather high strung and full of energy. They may work off excess energy by barking, especially if they don't receive enough exercise. Other breeds like the Norwegian elkhound, bred years ago to protect herds and property, bark to defend their homes from intruders, including birds, squirrels and the like.

Boredom is the main reason for long periods of senseless barking. A dog left alone indoors for hours at a time has little to do and will bark in the hope of attracting attention and companionship. It can respond to the telephone or the sound of people in an apartment hallway with an hour or more of nonstop noise.

Even more annoying is the night barker. This dog usually has slept all day and has excessive energy left over at bedtime. In such cases, a hard run at nightfall may help the dog become tired enough to sleep.

Anything you can do to provide some distraction while you're away for long periods can help control a barking dog. Some pets respond to a few new toys. Others are comforted by the sound of the television.

A major part of the solution is to let your dog know that he cannot bark indiscriminately and get away with it. "Informing" your dog will require time and effort on your part.

The next time your dog begins to bark at the wrong time, reprimand him with a firm, loud "NO!" Clap a folded newspaper against his hind quarters to impress your order upon him.

Then leave the area so that the pet cannot see you. Stay within earshot, and return quickly with a sharp reprimand if he begins to bark.

TIMBERLINE

By Rand Riedrich
Hancock County Forester

If the Cedar trees in your yard have spindle-shaped bags hanging from their branches, the trees are probably infested with the bagworm.

The most noticeable characteristic of the bagworm is the bag that the caterpillar or worm constructs of silk, twigs and leaves.

These bags are light brown in color, pointed at both ends with the upper end open through which the caterpillar feeds.

The caterpillar remains in the bag and drags it wherever it goes. When the bag is 1½ to 2 inches in length, the caterpillar is mature. Then it pupates and transforms into an adult.

Adult males fly to mate with wingless female moths that remain in the bags. A female adult can lay 500 to 1,000 eggs.

Bagworms are leaf-feeding insects that feed on the surface of leaves. They can completely defoliate a tree in some cases which may weaken the tree and cause death.

These insects have also been found on Honey and Black Locust, Box Elder, Maples, Arborvitae, Arizona Cypress and Pine trees.

If only a few bags are present on your tree, pick them off by hand and burn them for an effective means of control; however, one must be certain that there are no remaining bags, as there are numerous eggs inside each female bag.

Where infestations are heavy and where many trees are infested, the most convenient means of control is with the use of insecticide sprays. As with most insects the best time to obtain control with insecticides is when the worms are young.

Various insecticides such as Malathion, Diazinon and Sevin may be used to control bagworms. Contact a commercial nursery or garden shop to get one of the above insecticides.

Remember, insecticides are poisons — follow label instructions carefully.

Money Talk

By Norine Barnes

Are you cooking your energy dollar away? You can save your energy dollar in the kitchen by changing some of your cooking habits.

Learn to use your small appliances instead of your range. Portable appliances, such as your coffee maker, fry pan, portable oven and slow cooker, conserve energy by using less wattage than the average range. A small appliance with a thermostat uses less energy and gives more efficient transfer of heat. You can save at least 50 percent of the energy you use in food preparation by using the microwave oven and efficient use of small appliances.

By changing a few habits in the kitchen, you can help conserve some of the energy which you are wasting. You can change your habits and attitudes; it is just a matter of planning and thinking through your methods.

FARM ANIMALS LUCKY

Despite the contentions of some, farm animals never had it so good!

Take it from one who knows. This writer grew up tending registered Duroc Jersey hogs, caring for thousands of broilers and laying hens, rounding up cattle both on horse and afoot, breaking myself to a mule, sharing a dog's life through rabies, distemper and fits, and hand-milking several cows every morning.

We've come a long way. Consider the hog. In the thirties he either made out in a small boarded-up pigsty or pen — usually muddy, foul smelling and anything but hygienic. Sows often laid on and smothered their offspring to death, or onery, hungry old boars cannibalized a few if it struck their fancy. In winter, hog litters faced harsh times indeed and many didn't survive.

Today's sophisticated hog parlors feature an indoor, heat-controlled climate, slatted and periodically washed floors, stanchions to protect piglets from being mashed by their mothers, and total isolation from the boars.

Most can drink clean water by nuzzling their automatic supply. Carefully planned diets are there in automatic feeders in sharp contrast to the dry ears of unhusked corn often thrown into the mud of the pen, or the wheat shorts hand-mixed with cold water and dumped into a muddy trough with attendant jostling by the hogs to see which could get the most. And on some poorer farms, hogs had to make do with mostly onion skins, dish water, and rank ragweeds dumped into the pens.

The evolution for the better is no less for cattle who have enjoyed grazing pastures for most of their life span in all periods of history. In colder climates cattle usually are wintered inside a snug barn with plenty of clean hay for bedding and feed whenever the hunger pains strike.

Only feedlot conditions during finishing to provide both flavor and profit fall short of country living at its best for most of these animals.

In the good ol' (but not good enough) days of the past, poultry enjoyed an enviable social life in a chicken yard — a fenced enclosure around the chicken house out behind the farmhouse some place — but rats, mites, chicken snakes, and chicken hawks suddenly swooping out of the sky surely must have psyched them out terribly at times compared to the modern housed or caged conditions with constant fresh food, water, medication as needed, gas heat in curtained houses, and protection from predators.

Now mules are something else! No amount of sophistication can turn around their mastery of man. Mule breaking used to fascinate me as a kid. The mules came into our town by train and were corralled in a pen next to the rail siding. Here they were bought, some before and some after breaking.

For youngsters or non-farmers, mule breaking is the process man must go through at the hands of a brilliant mule so the two can make a go of it in the field behind a plow.

The mule has to get used to a harness, learn his gee or haw commands so he will know which way to turn or shift slightly to bring equipment into better alignment with the row.

And the farmer has to learn how to direct his mule or mule team and try to persuade him or them to cooperate some of the time.

Mules' tradition of having the run of the pasture when not working has changed little if any down through the years. Cruelty to mules is virtually unheard of in a one-on-one relationship albeit the opposite has not always held true.

Gulf Coast cooks, along with others of the South, are just about the "stuffingest cooks" ever.

I often think we stuff more delicious treats — flounder, shrimp, potatoes, onions, vegetables, oh, so many, many others such as chicken, meat, artichokes, and so on and on — than cooks anywhere else.

I was musing along those lines awhile ago, while stirring the pot in which celery, green onions and such were coming to a nice turn, along with the "insides" of a couple of eggplants, into whose glossy purple shells I would shortly stuff the aromatic mixture.

Usually, I like to halve the eggplants, dig out the pulp while raw, then set the shells aside while I chop and parboil said pulp, for that way the shells retain to a greater degree their purple hue and firmness.

At other times, when I want to eat the skin along with the stuffing or dressing, I halve and parboil the eggplants beforehand.

So, here's

STUFFED EGGPLANT

2 eggplants, medium to large size

4 green onions, with tops, finely chopped (or 1 cup chopped onion)

2 cloves garlic, minced

1/2 cup chopped celery

1 bay leaf

1 tsp. thyme

1 tsp. salt, dash of pepper

2 tbsp. chopped parsley

2 eggs, slightly beaten

2 or 3 slices of bread, moistened with water and squeezed dry and crumbled

1 cup coarsely chopped shrimp, cooked (you may want to use more)

1/4 cup dry bread crumbs

2 tbsp. (or more) grated Parmesan cheese

As above, first parboil the eggplant and set aside. Then, in a heavy pot (I use my cast iron Dutch oven that's older than I) saute the onions, green onions, garlic, celery, bay leaf, thyme, salt and pepper and parsley in a little bacon grease.

Add the chopped eggplant, and cook for 20 minutes or so, or until soft, stirring from time to time, over low heat.

Mix in the bread and gradually stir in the eggs, stirring all the while.

Add the shrimp, and be sure to remove the bay leaf at this time. Pile the mixture into the eggplant shells, top with bread crumbs and grated cheese. Dot with butter, and bake in a 350 oven for 20 minutes, until a nice brown atop. (Serves four).

You may easily substitute chopped ham for the shrimp, or crabmeat, or a mixture of crab and shrimp if you really want an extra-special treat. Mirilions, those delectable vegetable pears, are also quite good stuffed in this fashion. Use your imagination, and what's on hand; you'll come up with a good dish or two.

It may be well to remember that Memorial Day originated at the close of the Civil War, and therefore our memorial services this morning are a tribute to and a eulogy of those who died over the years since our nation was born...."

"Those men and women we memorialize in this service are now a valued part of our past as a nation and we should therefore properly meet in the spirit of thanksgiving for all that each of them gave to the rich heritage we call America. These people are a treasured part of our past and they should surely be embedded in the national memory."

"Because of their self-sacrifice our lives are free, and because of their self-sacrifice our nation was born and lives on."

"The history books are full of the things they did...they were courageous - no horror of field, or sea, or air combat could beat their courage down. They had what I call 'unflinching patriotism' - love of country and their dedication to defend this beautiful land of ours against all enemies...." the speaker stated.

"...I believe that our efforts as a nation to assist and maintain peace throughout the world is being conditioned by these values.... These veterans that we honor today sacrificed themselves to secure the future of our nation...."

Bourgeois closed his statements by saying, "They have contributed to a proud heritage - one which allows me to speak up without fear and say, I love my country and I am proud to be an American. May God bless them all."

A prelude was given by the Bay High Tiger Band with Commander Jack Doyle giving a welcoming address.

Drug, alcohol misuse common among elderly

The problem of drug misuse and the lack of adequate information regarding the use of drugs is widespread among elderly people.

Some drug combinations are extremely dangerous. They may trigger a medical crisis or, in rare instances, cause death, says Dr. Gail Cotton, program coordinator for gerontology, Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

A few years ago, the term

"drug abuse" was used exclusively to refer to the use of illegal drugs and substances.

Today the terms "misuse" and "abuse" are used to denote illegal use of drugs as well as the incorrect use of legal drugs.

We now hear frequent references to drug misuse and abuse, particularly among the elderly, Dr. Cotton says.

At the University of Minnesota, researchers found that only about 4.9 percent of the patients 65 years of age and older who were surveyed had the information and instructions needed to take the medicine prescribed for them.

A number of reasons were found which helped explain the lack of information available.

"Some of these reasons lie with the patients themselves," she adds.

"Sensory impairments, such as hearing and visual loss, often make it hard for patients to understand medical directions. The more complicated the directions, the more difficult it is for a patient with hearing or visual impairments to understand."

The research also points out that physicians are often to blame for the misunderstanding. They assume that patients understand exactly what is meant by taking medicine "as needed" or "on an empty stomach."

Too often patients, particularly the elderly, do not understand and often are afraid or embarrassed to ask.

The research suggests that better information could save lives and money.

Phyllis Lehmann, in an article on food and drug interactions, published in "Consumer," discusses the dangers of mixing alcohol with a wide variety of medications.

She points out that alcohol combined with antihistamines, tranquilizers or anti-depressants causes excessive drowsiness that can be especially dangerous to someone driving a car, operating machinery or performing any task that requires mental alertness.

Alcohol also does not mix well with a wide variety of medicines such as antibiotics, anti-coagulants, anti-diabetic drugs (including insulin), antihistamines and high blood pressure drugs.

She strongly recommends that a person avoid alcoholic beverages when taking any prescription or over-the-counter medicine.

Because of the interactions of a variety of drugs, Dr. Cotton says it is important for anyone taking drugs to tell both his physician and his pharmacist if he is taking other drugs.

Do not rely on friends' or relatives' advice; the extent of drug interaction may depend on the drug dosage as well as on the individual's age, size and specific medical condition, she adds.

These suggestions may be helpful to anyone on medication:

(1) Read the labels on over-the-counter remedies and the package inserts that come with prescription drugs.

(2) Follow your doctor's orders about when to take drugs and what foods or beverages to avoid while taking them.

(3) Don't be afraid to ask how drugs might interact with other drugs as well as with other foods or beverages.

(4) Be sure to tell your doctor about any unusual symptoms that follow the taking of drugs.

Research indicates that about 40 percent of the elderly need at least one drug a day to be able to pursue the activities of daily living.

Obviously the proper use of prescribed drugs can be highly beneficial to the elderly as well as others, Dr. Cotton says.

ART EXHIBITION—Lena McKnight, right, unveils her paintings at the Bay St. Louis City Hall recently where they will be on display for the next month. McKnight is a member of the Hancock County Art Association. She began studying art at Port Charlotte University in Florida in 1971 and later studied at Gulf Coast Junior College. Her studies have included work in oil and acrylic painting, pottery, paper mache and ceramics. Currently she is a member of an art class taught in Waveland by Retired Senior Volunteer Program instructor Carl Baldenhoter. Both oil and acrylic paintings are included in the city hall display. Better Boating

SAFETY TIPS

A story like this probably should be called a public service message—because that's what it's about... getting your boat on the surface of your favorite lake or river and keeping it safe once it's there.

Let's start with the thought that two ships that pass in the night is a beautiful notion but two boats that meet head-on can be a terrible mess. And then go on to say that there are rules of the road for boating to prevent that sort of thing.

A few of them are: Sailboats and rowboats almost always have the right of way over power boats. Any boat approaching from your right also has the right of way.

If two boats are approaching head-on, right is again right. Both boats should move to the right. If one boat is passing another, it can make the pass on either side. But remember, the boat being passed has the right of way.

Reduce speed when you're near a smaller boat or dock. Your wake can cause a lot of trouble.

The folks at State Farm Insurance, a water insurer, have some other tips that will keep pleasure boating more pleasant.

Be sure your boat is in proper operating condition and has all necessary equipment. This includes horns, lights, fire extinguishers and a first aid kit and flashlight.

Flotation devices should be available for every passenger. Children should wear life jackets at all times.

Don't go out in the boat if the weather is threatening. A quick call to your local marina or Coast Guard station will provide you with up-to-date boating conditions.

If you have an accident, there are basic things to remember.

If the boat capsizes, stay with it. Don't try to swim to shore. It's usually further than it looks.

If someone goes overboard, the key words to remember are: Reach, Throw and Row. Reach for the person with an oar, fishing pole or your arm. Or throw the victim a rope, life-preserver or other flotation device. And row the boat to them.

Louisiana promises fight against Texas shrimp ban

Louisiana will file suit to block a federal plan to close Texas coastal waters to shrimp fishing, according to Louisiana's Wild Life and Fisheries Secretary Jesse Guidry and Attorney General William Guste.

Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige last week approved final regulations for the closure, which is scheduled to begin Friday and continue through July 15. The closed area extends out 200 miles.

"The improvident closure of the Texas Fishery Conservation Zone, at the same time that Texas closes its territorial waters, will cause increased competition for shrimp in waters off the coast of Louisiana, and will overtax Louisiana dock and support facilities," Guste said in a statement.

"The resulting strain on resources is expected to adversely affect the cost of shrimping to the detriment of the Louisiana based shrimp fisherman," Guste said.

The suit to be filed by Guste's office will be directed toward preventing the closure of the Texas waters, and toward stopping the waste of small shrimp netted by Texas shrimpers.

"They literally cull from their nets and throw away small shrimp because of the Texas count law. Such small shrimp are, and have always been, an important part of the Louisiana shrimp market."

Secretary of Commerce, Baldrige, said the shrimping regulations resulted from a fishery management plan developed by the Gulf of Mexico Fishery Management Council.

Two principal effects of the regulations would establish a shrimp sanctuary in federal waters adjoining Florida's Tortugas Shrimp Sanctuary and would seasonally close the federal Gulf waters adjacent to Texas to 200 miles.

The later closure would correspond to Texas' 45-day closure within State waters normally from June 1 to July 15.

This year, however, due to favorable shrimp growing conditions in the bay nursery areas the State of Texas has extended its closed season from May 22 through July 15. Closure of federal waters will correspond and will be effective after midnight the morning of May 22.

This closure will not prevent vessels from landing in Texas ports shrimp that were caught elsewhere and conform to Texas law.

The purpose of the sanctuary and seasonal closure is to provide additional growing time for small shrimp to reach a greater size and to produce more pounds of shrimp.

This additional production and income is expected to provide economic aid to an ailing shrimp industry which has been hit hard by increasing fuel costs, the management council reported.

The new regulations also require that any vessel shrimping in federal waters display its official Coast Guard documentation number or state registration number.

The number must be printed or permanently attached to the port and starboard sides of the deckhouse or hull and on an appropriate weather deck where it is visible to aircraft. The numbers must be at least ten inches high on vessels less than 65 feet and at least 18 inches high on vessels over 65 feet.

The closed areas will be enforced by the U.S. Coast Guard and the National Marine Fisheries Service, and violators could be subject to federal fines up to $25,000.

Copies of the federal shrimp regulations showing the boundaries of the closed areas are available from the Fisheries Management Division, National Marine Fisheries Service, Duval Building, 9450 Koger Boulevard, St. Petersburg, Florida 33701.

GCRL to stock Bay St. Louis with 650,000 striped bass

A new feeding system and a new 7,000-gallon holding tank are expected to increase the already good survival rate of striped bass reared in the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory's anadromous fishes program, said Larry Nicholson, project leader.

In mid-April, laboratory personnel received the first shipment of fish for the year — 650,000 fry from the Santee Cooper Reservoir near Moncks Corner, S.C.

The 4-inch-long fish were flown to Mississippi packed in plastic bags containing water charged with pure oxygen. The tiny stripers were one and two days old. They are a riverine strain of fish.

At the lab the fry were placed in a closed recirculating seawater system that pumps water through 31, 1,000-gallon tanks and the new 7,000-gallon tank.

The fish will be reared in the tanks for 6-8 weeks, then stocked in the Biloxi Bay system, Nicholson said. A shipment of 650,000 more stripers (these from Virginia) is expected in May for rearing and stocking in the Bay of St. Louis system.

Also, a shipment of the Apalachicola strain of striped bass fingerlings is scheduled for delivery to the lab in October from U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service hatcheries in Louisiana and Alabama. They will be stocked in the Pascagoula River system.

While the very young fish are growing in laboratory raceways, they will be fed by automatic feeders instead of by hand. The feeders are filled each morning and evening.

At 6-minute intervals, they dispense measured amounts of food — brine shrimp for the first two weeks, then plankton which is raised in ponds on lab grounds.

The new feeding system was designed, constructed, and installed by Nicholson and project staff members Jimmy Christmas and Ron Lukens. "By feeding the fish smaller amounts over longer hours and allowing them to feed all day, we hope to cut down on cannibalism," Nicholson said. Cannibalism is one of the main problems affecting survival rates.

Also, since the food will be distributed more equally, we are hoping for a more equal growth rate," Nicholson said.

"Last year, over all, our survival rate was 31 percent, and we believe that the new feeders and new tank will help to increase it," he said.

Over the past year 27 stripers were caught and reported to the Laboratory, but Nicholson estimates that approximately 300 were caught but not officially reported. Most of the fish reported were caught in the Tchoutacabouffa River.

"We still need the help of local fishermen in reporting striped bass catches to the Laboratory," emphasized Nicholson.

"Locating a good source of brood stock that have adapted to Mississippi waters is one of our major objectives; then we can spawn the fish here instead of having them flown in," said Nicholson. "Of course our ultimate objective is to see evidence that they are spawning naturally in the rivers and streams of this area," he added.

About 500,000 striped bass fry also were taken to Jackson to be reared and stocked in the Ross Barnett Reservoir by the Bureau of Fisheries and Wildlife, the agency which has control over state freshwater streams. The lab has been coordinating striped stocking efforts with that agency for several years.

This is the second year of a new three-year study which is funded by the National Marine Fisheries Service, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, and the State of Mississippi.

Sports network begins new schedule service

ESPN, the Entertainment and Sports Programming Network, has introduced two new services to update its viewers on the latest schedule plans and changes.

Dick Stain, vice-president for marketing services said a national toll-free "Prime-time Hot Line" has been installed to update viewers in the contiguous United States about ESPN's program plans for that evening.

By calling 1-800-243-0000, viewers can hear one of ESPN's staff announcers preview the prime-time schedule for that evening.

These calls are free-of-charge, with a recording that runs between 30 and 60 seconds in length.

Viewers here must subtract one hour from the Eastern times used on the recording. "The nature of our network is such that there will always be late schedule changes, so that we may offer our viewers the very best programming possible," said Stain. "With the introduction of this toll-free service, however, our viewers can now get up-to-the-minute information about our schedule for each evening."

To achieve the same goal, ESPN has also placed brief programming update reports into its schedule three times each day, at 7 a.m., 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Three to five minutes in length, the coming 24 hours of programming is previewed by a member of ESPN's Sports Center staff.

A subsidiary of the Getty Oil Company, ESPN is already the largest advertiser-supported, fully cable-delivered network in the United States, with more than nine million subscriber homes in every state except Hawaii.

Wandering Dog Owner's Fault

Wandering dogs are considered a neighborhood nuisance. But angry neighbors often blame the dog rather than the dog's owner, and horror stories of abuse are not uncommon.

While wandering the dog will almost certainly leave droppings on lawns and may even chase cars or bicycles, possibly injuring others. Because of these and similar reasons it is important for all owners to remember that a dog—no matter how well trained—should be kept on a leash or in a fenced area.

Keeping a dog on its own property is the owner's responsibility. Dogs wander for different reasons. Many dogs wander because they do not know that running away is incorrect behavior, never having been taught to come when called and other basic commands. Some dogs are simply more adventurous, wandering because their owners have never exposed or socialized them to the territory beyond their home.

Proper exercise is frequently overlooked or ignored as a way of eliminating wandering. Without sufficient exercise a dog is more likely to bolt away, running, until he releases his pent-up energies. Owners must arrange for lengthy play periods or work outs.

Allowing the dog the "freedom to wander" is no favor to the dog or the community. But, where there are no physical borders, frequent on-leash trips around the boundaries of the property help

Jogging rates tops in fitness promotion

How well do various sporting activities rate in the promotion of physical fitness and general well-being?

Much controversy has arisen over the value of different activities with participants defending their interest as being worthwhile. While the recreational values of an activity can not be accurately determined because of individual preferences, fitness values can.

A joint study by the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, and the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (now Department of Health and Human Services) ranked recreational activities.

Rated number one for its fitness and general well-being benefits was jogging, followed by bicycling, swimming, skating, handball-squash, basketball, tennis, calisthenics, walking, golf, softball and bowling.

Jogging was assessed as being very beneficial for cardiorespiratory endurance (stamina), muscular endurance, muscular strength, balance, weight control, muscle definition, digestion and sleep.

Flexibility was the only major area in which jogging scored poorly.

Bicycling ranked well in the same categories as jogging, showing a slightly higher rating in balance and muscle definition. Flexibility was a weak area for bicycling.

In an effort to promote bicycling in Mississippi as a means of transportation and as a fitness activity, Governor William F. Winter has proclaimed May as State Cycling Month.

The Governor's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports and the American Cancer Society have planned a series of bicycle tours for the state May 28-30.

The tours will begin in all sections of the state and culminate in Jackson with the Cycle Celebration 1981 in Smith Park on May 30.

Bicyclists in Mississippi have the same rights and responsibilities as motorists. For the motorist this means that a cyclist traveling in the right lane has the same right of way to that lane.

For the cyclist it means that he must obey all traffic rules, including stopping at stop signs and for red traffic signals, abide by the posted speed limits, and not follow too closely to another vehicle.

Following are 12 suggested safe bike driving rules:

1) Obey all applicable traffic regulations, signs, signals and markings.

2) Observe all local ordinances pertaining to bicycle operation.

3) Keep right, drive WITH traffic, not against it. Drive single file.

4) Watch out for drain gates, soft shoulders and other road surface hazards.

5) Watch out for car doors opening, or for cars pulling out into traffic.

6) Don't carry passengers or packages that interfere with your vision or control.

7) Never hitch a ride on a truck or other vehicle.

8) Be extremely careful at all intersections, particularly when making a left turn.

9) Use hand signals to indicate turning or stopping.

10) Protect yourself at night with required reflectors and lights. Wear white clothing at night.

11) Drive a safe bike. Have it inspected to ensure good mechanical condition.

12) Drive your bike defensively; watch out for the other guy.

For more information about Mississippi Cycle Tour 1981, the values of bicycling, or a complete list of the physical fitness and general well-being values of a variety of recreational and sports activities, write the Governor's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports, 723 North President, Suite 450, Jackson, MS 39201.

Mullet—fun to catch, good to eat

Nothing says Mississippi Gulf Coast plainer than a fish fry—from political rallies to family reunions, the fish fry is to Mississippi what a barbecue is to Texas.

Along the Mississippi coast, the fish most often served at a fish fry is the striped mullet, also known locally as "Biloxi bacon."

The term is believed to have originated during the depression of the 1930's when the fish was scarce and mullet was plentiful.

Mullet is still the most inexpensive fish in the seafood market, probably one of the reasons it is used so frequently at fish fries.

Another reason is that mullet is readily available to anyone who knows how to throw a cast net. But, mainly mullet is popular because fresh fried mullet is such good eating.

Aifton Krohn, a native Biloxian who works for Mississippi Power Company, has been "mulletting" for at least 35 years. "I started throwing the net when I came home from World War II," said Krohn, "and I've been doing it ever since."

Mullet are caught by throwing a cast net from a small boat or pier, or while wading in shallow water along the beach. The round 1-inch mesh nets may be made of twisted nylon line, monofilament, and they are weighted around the edge with a galvanized chain.

"Nets run from 7 to 12 feet in size with the average being about 9 feet," Krohn said, "that's the size I use."

There is a certain rhythm involved in throwing the net and some practice is required to master it, Krohn said. "You've got to stay loose; if you tighten up, the net won't spread for you." The best thing to do, advises Krohn, "is to get someone to show you how to throw the net, and then practice until you get the hang of it."

A good net, measuring 9 feet across will probably cost $125 today, but with proper care, it should last for years. Krohn said that the net should be washed every time it is used to remove any small fish that might be trapped; then it should be dried and stored in the shade. "Keep it away from the sun; the sun is hard on nylon," he added.

The average mullet weighs only ¾ to 1 pound and is about 15-16 inches long. "The largest one I ever caught was 3 pounds," said Krohn. A good throw might net 10-20 if the fish are there, but Krohn has caught as many as 60-85 in one cast of the net.

And, I know people who have caught more," he said. Summer and early fall are the best times to catch mullet, but they may be caught all year long. Mullet are all along the beach in the summer, especially near the Broadwater Hotel. "Some people catch a few mullet in Back Bay (of Biloxi) on bait," said Krohn, but he finds them too strong and not as tasty as fish caught in more salty water.

The best time to fish for mullet is at night or every early in the morning, Krohn said. "More fish are about then and they can't see things as well," he observed. "When the sun gets up and the water is clear, the fish will get out of the net."

Mullet generally are caught in shallow water, 3, 2 or even 1-foot deep, according to Krohn. Fishing for high tide is favorable for mulleting. The mullet come in to shore on the rising tide; on a low tide, they go to deeper water; and cast nets don't work well in depths over 5 feet, he explained.

Krohn's favorite area for mullet fishing is around Deer Island. "I can count on catching a few there when I can't catch them anywhere else," he prefers the south side, but moves to the north side if it gets too choppy. "A little wind is good for mullet fishing," he continued. "If the water is a little choppy the fish can't hear the boat."

No lights are needed for mullet fishing, except those required for boating safety. Krohn usually takes a flashlight along for general use. He fishes from a small boat and recommends a 14-15 foot skiff for the shallow water.

Krohn feels that there are not as many mullet as there used to be, probably, he adds, "because of the commercial fishing with gill nets 1,000 feet long." "I don't think that recreational cast netters could hurt the fishing," he added.

Many mullet fishermen, like Krohn, don't wait for a special occasion or a big fish fry. They go mulletting at night, take the catch home and file it, then fry the fresh mullet for breakfast or lunch next day at home or with coworkers.

Frying is the best way to cook mullet, contends Krohn, but they also can be smoked, broiled or mixed with potatoes and seasonings and formed into cakes for frying.

"Biloxi bacon" is also good marinated in garlic, green onions, lemon juice, oil, salt, and pepper before frying.

"But, usually, we can't wait long enough for the marinade to soak in before we are ready to eat them," confessed Krohn. Reprinted by permission from Gulf Coast Research Laboratories' Marine Briefs.

Jeff Davis plans swimming classes

Gulf Coast Junior College will offer several swimming programs this summer at the Jefferson Davis Campus.

Classes include mother-child beginning and intermediate swimming, adult swimming and community recreational swimming.

Registration for all classes is Tuesday through Thursday, May 26-28 from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. and Friday, May 29, 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the campus gym, Room L-132.

Classes are for two-week sessions 9-10 a.m., 10-11 a.m. and 11 a.m. to noon. They are scheduled for June 1-12, June 15-26, June 29 to July 10 and July 13-24. There will be no registration by phone or mail.

Randy Anastasio, health and physical education instructor at the campus, said the mother-child classes are for infants 18 months to five-years-old. Beginning classes are for children six-years-old and older with no swimming experience and intermediate for those who have some basic swimming skills.

"Classes are limited in size and are registered on a first come-first served basis," Anastasio said. "There is one instructor for every six students. We work in small groups and every child will receive individual instruction."

Adult swimming classes meet one night a week on Monday or Thursday nights for eight weeks from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

During the summer the college will open the pool from 1 p.m. to 7 p.m., Monday through Friday and 1-5 p.m. on Saturday. Families and individuals may use the facilities for $35 a month charge or $5 for three months. All swimmers must be at least 18-years-old or accompanied by an adult. Lifeguards will be on duty daily.

Animal longevity studied for clues to human aging

A field mouse in the wild is lucky to live to be a year old. Yet, its cousin, the pocket mouse may live to five years of age. Why do some animals live longer than others? And how do different animal species regard their elders?

According to International Wildlife magazine, scientists are studying senescence, or aging, in wildlife to find out the answers to these questions, and in turn, to better understand the processes involved in human aging.

The answer to the mouse mystery is simple. "Some small mammals may live longer than others of similar size because they spend part of their lives in hibernation or in dormancy, their bodies barely functioning," explains the "National Wildlife Federation's bi-monthly publication.

Thus the pocket mouse, which spends the hot desert season in a state of torpor, will live much longer than the on-the-go field mouse.

Until recently, almost everything we knew about animals that live to be old came from zoos.

Longevity records for zoo animals, says International Wildlife, include: a 77-year-old elephant; a 65-year-old vulture; a 49-year-old hippopotamus; a 38-year-old zebra.

Cold-blooded animals last even longer, with tortoises reaching 150 years; sturgeon, 100; carp, 50; and toads, 36.

Unfortunately, zoo records can be misleading since animals tend to live longer in the security of a zoo than they do in the wild. However, such records do give us an appreciation for some species' potential life spans.

"Animals that are most likely to live to be old in the wild are those which, as adults, have no predators except man," says International Wildlife.

Most of these are large — elephants, hippos, rhinos, lions, tigers and wolves.

But some, such as the Galapagos tortoise, survive not only because of their large size, but also because of their isolated habitat.

Scientists have found that a wild animal's age can be estimated in many ways, such as by inspecting the lens from a rabbit's eye, the thickness of baleen plates in the mouths of whales, the annual rings in the horns of sheep and antelope, and tooth wear, or in some species, "rings" in a tooth.

Teeth are, in fact, one of the most important considerations for life in the wild; research shows that most wild animals live only as long as their teeth hold out.

After spending years living among some species in the wild, animal behaviorists have observed that in the "social" species — those animals that live and travel in groups — older males and females are treated quite differently.

"Males are generally of prime importance to a social group only when they are dominant," says International Wildlife.

Eventually, older males are driven from a group by younger males when their strength and breeding capacity have been reduced by age.

Older females, in contrast, do not seem to suffer this loss of social status. Among most species, old females usually continue to reproduce, although they have fewer offspring than the younger females.

Female elephants up to fifty years of age continue to function as "matriarchs" in their social group, and even the feeblest lionesses are allowed to share the kills of other pride members.

Vickie Young takes two awards in international science event

Vickie Young, valedictorian of the Bay High Class of 1981, received an American Chemical Society award and a citation from the U.S. Patent Office at a recent 1981 International Science and Engineering Fair in Minneapolis. The event was designed to recognize the most innovative young scientists in the world.

Miss Young reached the international level of competition with a process to make paper from the kudzu plant.

Seven students who were winners in Mississippi state competition went on to compete against hundreds of high school students who were also judged tops in their categories through district fairs held this Spring.

Professional societies, major corporations and the U.S. government presented winners with plaques, trophies and cash as they judged the students on creativity and scientific understanding, according to Lawrence Bellipanni, state fair director at the University of Southern Mississippi who was on hand for the judging.

Other Mississippi winners included Region I (Hattiesburg)—Daniel H. Linder, Hattiesburg Blair High School, Association for Computing Machinery Award and a first place honor from the Institute of Electronic and Electrical Engineers (IEEE).

Linder's computer-related project was entitled: "Optical disk — a supplemental memory system." In the final round of competition Saturday night Linder was also recognized in the engineering category.

Region IV (Oxford) — Brennan James Peterson, Lafayette High School, first place award from the General Motors Corporation.

Region VI (Starkville) — David Scott Martin, Starkville High School, Acoustical Society of America Award.

Teachers union grades State Senate, House

Commencing with the 1981 session, the Mississippi State Legislature has been graded and issued report cards by teachers of Mississippi, according to a statement by James V. Cater, president of the Mississippi American Federation of Teachers.

"It seems only fitting that teachers, who are in the business of preparing report cards, should make one for the legislature," Cater said.

"After all, this body determines the future progress of our state in the areas of education and governance, and it is only proper that they be graded for their efforts to aid progress or, in some cases, to impede progress," Cater added.

The president of the teachers' union explained that

S.B. 2129 - Compulsory school attendance law.	F	Died after a hearing in Senate Education Subcommittee chaired by Sen. B. Thames (Mize). A spokesman for the Moral Majority of Mississippi testified against compulsory education stating that the concept of public education was in accordance with communist doctrine. Of 3 school superintendents who testified, 2 stated that there were more important educational needs than compulsory school attendance. The AFT and MAE spoke in support of the bill. The spokesman for the Ms. School Boards Assoc. declined to make a statement. Senators Kirksey (Jackson) and Usey (Gulfport), to their great credit, were the only legislators who challenged the Moral Majority on their statement linking public education and communism.
S.B. 2167 - An act to establish a teacher's aide program as a requirement for entrance into a teacher education program at institutions of higher learning.	F	Never seriously considered by Senate Education Committee or Senate Universities and Colleges Committee. Bill was designed to expose candidates to the teaching profession and evaluate candidates' abilities at an early stage of their education thereby diverting unsuitable teacher candidates to other careers. This bill would have upgraded the quality of teaching in Mississippi.
S.B. 2417 - An act to provide for maximum student enrollment in grades 1, 2, 3, 4 of 24 and average daily attendance of 22.	F	This bill would have improved the quality of education in the early critical grades but was never considered by the Senate Education Committee chaired by Sen. Jack Gordon (Okolona).
S.B. 2456 - An act to provide 3 days professional/personal leave for teachers in addition to their 5 days sick leave.	F	To the credit of the Senate Education Committee chaired by Sen. Jack Gordon (Okolona), the bill passed this committee but was recommended to the committee by the Senate when it reached the Senate floor.
S.B. 2766 - Minimum Program Bill (Teacher Pay).	D	This was a good bill which included a realistic pay scale and provided a very important fringe benefit to teachers by including them under state employees' health/life insurance programs. The bill passed the Education Committee and the full Senate; however, in the House/Senate conference over differing versions of the bill, the Senate backed down and, for the second year in a row, allowed the Speaker of the House to dictate his terms concerning the contents of the bill. Consequently, teachers lost the important insurance benefits. A classic case of making A's during the course, but failing the final exam.
Ethics
S.B. 2114 - Open public records.	F	No action by Senate Judiciary Committee chaired by Sen. Martin Smith (Poplarville).
S.B. 2113 - Open meetings of public bodies.	B	Passed the Senate Judiciary Committee chaired by Sen. Martin Smith (Poplarville) and the full Senate. Bill later weakened by House amendments which were accepted by the Senate.
S.B. 2367 - An act to establish a public integrity division in the Attorney General's office to investigate and prosecute corruption by public officials in the performance of their duties.	F	No action by Senate Judiciary Committee chaired by Sen. Martin Smith (Poplarville). The Ms. American Federation of Teachers is of the opinion that many financial transactions of school officials, particularly in the areas of contracting, student activity fund expenditures, and purchasing, need closer scrutiny by state investigative agencies.
S.B. 2680 - Revision of School Employment Procedures Act to require showing of "good cause" for failure to renew teacher's contract.	F	No action by Senate Education Committee chaired by Sen. Jack Gordon (Okolona). Bill would have restored justice to the law governing the renewal of teachers' contracts.
Government
S.B. 2017 - An act to provide for election of trustees of municipal separate and special municipal separate school districts.	F	No action by Senate Education Committee chaired by Sen. Jack Gordon (Okolona). Bill would have assured that trustees were the choice of the entire electorate rather than the choice of a few powerful politicians who sometimes use school board appointments to repay political debts. The good of education is often overlooked in the process.
S.B. 2160 - An act to provide for appointment of county superintendents of education by county boards of education.	F	No action by Senate Education Subcommittee chaired by Sen. Algie Davis (Meridian). Bill would have provided for appointment, rather than election, of county superintendents. This would have made the superintendent accountable to the school board and the school board responsible to the people who elected them.

REMARKS: The Senate shows promise of knowing what is right and attempting to do something about it. In that sense, the overall failing grades attained by the Senate on this report card are not representative of its true potential. However, in the final analysis, the Senate seems to lack the will to follow through on its good intentions. Its continued submission to the Speaker of the House on matters affecting education are indicative of this failing. We hope that in the next session the Senate will be more assertive and stand up for its beliefs.

REPORT CARD OF: House of Representatives, Mississippi Legislature, 1981 Session

Course/Subject	Grade	Comment
Education
H.B. 84 - Maximum enrollment of 24 in grades 1, 2, 3, and 4.	F	Never seriously considered by House Education Subcommittee chaired by Rep. Ed Buelow, Jr. (Vicksburg). This bill would have improved quality of education in the important lower elementary grades.
H.B. 143 - Compulsory school attendance law.	F	Never seriously considered by House Education Subcommittee chaired by Rep. Edward Jackson (Cleveland). Failure of this bill was a serious blow to improving the level of education in the state.
H.B. 183 - Permit full-time course loads for students at branch campuses of universities and colleges.	A	Introduced by Rep. Gerald Blasley (Harrison Cty.); passed full House but later killed by Senate. Bill would have equalized educational opportunity in expanded area of state.
H.B. 991 - Minimum Program Bill (Teacher Pay)	D	This House bill passed both House and Senate. It increases teachers' pay between approximately 7% and 10% and supportive services from $2600/teacher unit to $2775/teacher unit. This represents another 3% to 5% loss in purchasing power of teachers in this state, bringing our total loss in purchasing power over last three years to approximately 12% to 15%. Most serious deficiency in this bill is that it does not make available to teachers the same health/life insurance programs provided at state expense to other state employees. Teachers support the Ms. Public Employees Retirement System but are not allowed to share in the state insurance program. This inequity is due primarily to the whim of Speaker of the House Buddy Newman and to unwillingness on the part of his cohorts to challenge him.
Ethics
H.B. 242 - An act to prohibit conflicts of interest relating to sale of goods or services to schools by school personnel or their immediate families.	F	Did not pass House Education Subcommittee chaired by Rep. Thomas Walman (McComb). This bill would have stopped current questionable practice and increased citizen confidence in their elected and appointed officials.
H.B. 369 - An act to require open meetings of public bodies except under certain conditions.	D	Bill passed House after being seriously weakened by amendments. Original bill would have prohibited action in executive session and would have stringently limited permissible reasons for going into executive session. Bill which passed is minimally acceptable.
Ethics
H.B. 371 - The open public records bill.	F	Despite the commendable efforts of Rep. J.P. Compretta (Hancock Cty.), Subcommittee Chairman, and Rep. Dennis Dollar (Harrison Cty.), sponsor of the bill, the bill did not pass the House. Failure was due to a parliamentary maneuver by the House leadership which cynically used the so-called Black Caucus by forcing them to choose between two bills, both of which they supported. They opted for the one which they thought would aid black citizens the most.
H.B. 717 - Revision of School Employees Procedures Act to require showing of "good cause" for failure to renew teacher's contract.	F	Died in House Education Subcommittee chaired by Rep. James Price (Quitman). Rep. Price stated that hearing was not held on the bill at the request of the Ms. Association of Educators, who did not like the bill. Bill would have restored justice to the law governing the renewal of teachers' contracts.
Government
H.B. 179 - An act to require the election of all trustees of municipal separate and special municipal separate school districts.	F	Hearing on the bill was not held by Rep. James Price's subcommittee of the House Education Committee chaired by Rep. Robert Clark (Lexington). Bill would have assured that trustees were the choice of the entire electorate rather than the choice of a few powerful politicians who sometimes use school board appointments to repay political debts. The good of education is often overlooked in the process.
H.B. 945 - An act to permit public employees to apply creditable service as public employees of another state to the Ms. Public Employees Retirement System.	F	Died without a hearing in the House Appropriations Committee chaired by Rep. Ed Perry (Oxford). Mississippi is one of the very few states without a reciprocal agreement to allow transfer of retirement credits between states or a provision to allow state employees to "buy-in" to the Ms. State Retirement System for creditable service in another state. The lack of such provision or agreement is detrimental to the welfare of public employees, including teachers.
H.B. 1108 - Public employees collective bargaining bill.	F	This bill was referred to the House Labor Committee which has not met since 1976. The bill would have provided uniform procedures for collective bargaining in the public sector.

REMARKS: The House of Representatives, Mississippi Legislature, failed miserably in most areas. From the point of view of improving education, fostering ethical standards, and strengthening representative government, the House of Representatives wasted its time and the taxpayers' money in 1981. One can only wonder when the House membership will insist on placing principle above expediency. Apparently, this will not happen as long as citizens and their elected representatives meekly submit to the caliber of leadership which now rules the House. We hope they will do better in their next session.

USM offering computer camp

High school students in grades 9-12 can gain valuable computer science knowledge this summer at the University of Southern Mississippi Computer Week Camp, June 8-12.

Danny R. Carter, chairman of the sponsoring USM Department of computer Science and Statistics, will direct the campers in BASIC, FORTRAN and PASCAL programming languages.

Beginning students with no programming experience will receive extensive instruction on the TRS-80 BASIC and an introduction to FORTRAN.

Students in high school looking toward a college major will benefit tremendously from learning computer science prior to their first college course, the chairman said.

Students of liberal arts disciplines are now involved with computer use, not to mention the necessity computers play in the curricula of science and business students and professionals.

Parents are invited to attend the first day of camp June 8 when campers report to the Technology Center for 10 a.m. registration.

The camp will be an educational experience, but when it's all over there will be a picnic, programming and adventure contests, and numerous recreation activities.

For registration or fee information contact: Danny R. Carter, Southern Station Box 5136, Hattiesburg, MS 39401 or call 266-7298.

USM Senior Day

The University of Southern Mississippi's annual Senior Celebration will be held on Saturday, June 6, from 8 a.m. until 11 p.m. in the University Union.

"Celebration" is a free dance with free refreshments for high school students who will be seniors in the upcoming year.

There will be door prizes and a dance contest. The first prize winner receives two tickets to USM's first home football game this fall. All seniors of '82 are invited.

SPECIAL EDUCATION SEMINAR—Representatives from the Mississippi Department of Education recently presented a seminar at the Hancock County School District's office on Court Street in Bay St. Louis for teachers in the school system's special education department. Topics discussed during the two day workshop included a referral to replacement process and an individual education plan for special education students. Debra Burris, right, from the state department, discusses some finer points of the workshop with Polly Shaw, left, a learning disability teacher at Hancock North Central Junior High. Bonita Favre, second from left, and Sue Hufford, both teachers of educable mentally retarded students at Hancock North Central Senior and Junior High Schools, respectively, review notes of the session. (Staff photo by Brent Macey)

VOICE OF DEMOCRACY—Mike Ladner, left, Hancock County veteran's service officer and commander-elect of the Kiln Veterans of Foreign Wars Post, and Joyce Ladner, member of the Kiln Post's Ladies Auxiliary and chairman of its Voice of Democracy Program, recently presented a plaque to the Hancock County School System for Hancock North Central Senior High School's participation in the program. Billy Sills, school superintendent, and Harlin Hill, federal programs coordinator for the school district and state chairman for The Voice of Democracy Program, accept the award for the school system. Students in grades 10 through 12 at HNC participated in the program and wrote essays on the theme 'My Commitment to my Country'. The essays were taped, and winners were later judged by VFW committees on district, state, and national levels. (Staff photo by Brent Macey)

USM food, housing costs increased

The Board of Trustees State Institutions of Higher Learning has approved increases in meal plans, post office box rent and housing fees at the University of Southern Mississippi.

The request to increase the fees was made due to inflation and rising operating costs at USM, university administrators said.

Meal plans will rise in cost beginning fall semester. The seven day plan will cost $395 for a regular semester and $270 for the summer term '82. The five day plan will cost $380 per semester and $245 per summer term.

Post office box rent will increase from $11 to $16 per semester, also effective this fall.

New housing rates for the summer term '81 are: Air-conditioned dorms, $256; Hillcrest, $296; and Pine Haven one bedroom, $365, two bedroom, $415, and three bedroom, $455.

Dormitory rent for the regular semesters '81-'82 are: Non air-conditioned, $345; Air-conditioned, $385; Vann Hall, $430; Elam Arms-Hillcrest, $445; and Pine Haven one bedroom, $577.50, two bedroom, $622.50, and three bedroom, $697.50.

OWL EXHIBIT—Max, a baby screech owl at the Audubon Zoological Garden in New Orleans, gets a helping hand from Anne-Marie Orlovski, head of the zoo's Bird Rehabilitation Program, to get a better view of the oversized owl from National Supermarkets. The two owls were on hand for a recent opening of the zoo's native barred owl exhibit, first time the barred owls have been on display at the zoo.
